SEXUAL HARASSMENT POLICY.

Funeral Services of Australasia Pty. Ltd. is committed to providing a workplace which is safe for its Employees and free from sexual harassment. Sexual harassment is defined as unwelcome and uninvited behaviour or comments of a sexual nature, where the person receiving the harassment (1) has grounds to believe that objection to or rejection of the behaviour would disadvantage her/him at work or (2) is being harassed by persistent sexual suggestions or innuendo or sexual advances which she/he is not free to avoid.

It may include:

- * demands for sexual favours:
- * repeated, unwanted physical and bodily contact:
- * sex oriented jokes, leers, offensive gestures or telephone conversations:
- * subtle pressure or unwanted propositions:
- * indecent or sexual assault (these are also criminal offences):
- * distribution or display of material regarded as offensive:
- * questioning about aspects of a staff member's private life.

Sexual harassment does not include mutually acceptable behaviour of a sexual nature.

It is important to recognise that behaviour or comments which may not offend one person may be unwelcome or offensive to another person.

Sexual harassment will not be tolerated in the workplace and appropriate action will be taken whenever it is found to occur. The Company will act immediately to thoroughly investigate complaints or sexual harassment.

Whilst it is anticipated that where issues arise they will be dealt with either between the parties or by conciliation, a complaints procedure has been established to address such matters. Where a complaint has been lodged the Company will take action to ensure that the harassment ceases or, if evidence suggests that it did not occur, that the reputation of the relevant individual(s) is protected.

SEXUAL HARASSMENT - WHAT TO DO.

If you feel you have been sexually harassed at work, you should inform the offender immediately that it is offensive and unwelcomed.

If after this action the behaviour does not stop or if it is not feasible to inform the offender then you can make a formal complaint. This can be done in the following ways:

You may inform you Location Manager or Manager of your complaint Your Location Manager or Manager is charged with the responsibility to treat all complaints seriously, investigate quickly and to resolve the complaint in the most appropriate manner.

Our aim is to create a confidential environment and to promptly resolve all complaints, so that we can provide a working environment free of sexual harassment for all staff.
